What's New at PWS

Since the last issue of this newsletter, the Bridging the Watershed team has been busy working on various projects. We have been focusing on improving the educational materials and resources available for teachers and students. We have also been exploring new partnerships with local organizations to expand our reach.

Clearance to Public Use

The National Park Service has approved the clearing of a portion of the trail. This will allow for better access to the area and may improve safety for visitors. We will be updating our website with the new trail map and directions soon.

Tips for Teachers: New Ways to Show Your PWS Love

For the upcoming school year, we have created a new set of lesson plans and activities. These resources are designed to help teachers incorporate our materials into their curricula. We encourage you to check out our website for more information.

Opportunities for Volunteers

We are always looking for volunteers to help with our conservation projects. If you are interested in getting involved, please visit our website or contact us directly.

Wells Fargo Theatre-in-the-Program

The Wells Fargo Theatre-in-the-Program is a unique opportunity for students to engage in hands-on learning experiences. This program provides students with the chance to explore topics related to conservation and environmental stewardship. We are currently accepting applications for the upcoming school year.

Special Events

This fall, we have scheduled several special events, including a fall foliage hike and a workshop on native plant identification. These events are open to the public, and we encourage you to join us.

We hope you find this newsletter informative and helpful. Please feel free to contact us with any questions or feedback.
